COUNTY FAIR BY THE ALPHA SIGMA

Held on the Grounds of Mr. and Mrs. Frank A. Bill in West Thames Street-Large Attendance, Many Attractions, Successful Outcome.

There was plenty to do; plenty to see and plenty to buy for all who attended the county fair, Tuesday afternoon and evening on the handsome grounds of Mr. and Mrs. Frank A. Bill of West Thames street.

The fair was given under the auspices of the Alpha Sigmas of the Second Congregational church and was an entertainment of unqualified success. The grounds were attractively decorated with flags, bunting and Japanese lahterns.

In the evening the grounds were especially pretty being lighted with many red, white and blue lanterns strung among the trees.

The tables were also attractive, decorated with ferns and roses.

Pretty Flower Girls.

Adding much to the beauty of the scene were the flower girls daintily gowned and wearing pretty caps, selling flowers from flower trimmed baskets, as were peanut girls who sold peanuts, pop-corn and candy. Tha flower girls were Miss Katherine Conant, chairman; Miss Martha Reynolds, Miss Marjorie Volkman, Miss Doris Drake, Miss Gertrude Allen and Miss Corinne Johnson. Those selling peanuts, pop-corn and candy were Miss Ione Breckenridge, Miss Lucille Stephenson and Miss Natalie Brown, As at all county fairs there was a large attendance, many going early and staying late, viciting the many attractions, attending the races and patronizing the booths filled with good things to eat.

As always, the races were an attractive feature. The race track though small was in the best condition though small was in the best condition and the attendance was large and enthusiestic. Among the several exhibits were the tame Dear, two blind bats and the real Blarney-stine which will, as Winifred Young announced through a megaphone bring nine lucky years to all who kiss it.

The shooting gallery was a success. The successful markmen winning a cone of ice cream.

Danielson, June 28.—Robert Alcorn of Stedman camp, No. 6, of Hartford, installed the officers of the newly organized Edward Anderson camp, No. 20, Sons of Veterans, in G. A. R. hall this evening. Visitors were present from Putnam and other surrounding towns, among them A. O. Fairbanks, commander of the camp at Norwich. A letter of appreciation of the honor shown was read from Rev. Edward Anderson of Quincy, Mass., formerly pastor of the Congregational church here for whom the camp is named. here for whom the camp is named. here for whom the camp is named. The officers installed were: Commander, Edward A. Brown; senior vice commander, Herbert R. Neff; junior vice commander, Andrew E. Mesch; treasurer, A. F. Wood; secretary, E. C. Babson; inside guard, A. Stinson; outside guard, H. M. Burgess; chaplain, Rev. W. J. Reynolds.

The following were named as a committee to draw up rules and bylaws: Dr. F. W. Darmer, William Keach, John Day, H. R. Neff and H. M. Burgess;

The Japanese Treaty.

The Japanese Treaty.

The announcement that Japan will open the way for a new treaty with the United States to take the place of the "treaty of commerce and navigation," which went into operation in July 1899, to remain in force twelve years, is not surprising. It is provided in the instrument that "either high contracting party shall have the right at any time " to give notice to the other of its intention to terminate the same." In its original form the right was restrained until after eleven years has expired; and, in fact, the action of Japan is in accordance with the terms before amendment.

eleven years has expired; and, in fact, the action of Japan is in accordance with, the terms before amendment. So, too it apepars that while the provision is that the treaty shall cease and determine 11 months after such notice, the compact endures as originally contemplated, namely, until July, 1911. The action is thus entirely in good part and good order.

Naturally, Japan is eager to make new arrangements with the United States and other powers as well. She is today regarded as a world power, rather than simply an Oriental power. Her treaties of 1899 were shortly succeeded by the Anglo-Japanese alliance, an enochal event in her history. It will be recailed that a paragraph in the now expiring treaty created menacing confusion at the time. San Francisco raised the question of a right to shut out Japanese children from her public schools,—Providence Jeernal. public schools.-Providence Journal.

Daisy May Pole.

The daisy May pole dance in which ropes of daisies were used gracefully given by twelve misses, singing "The Song of the Daisies," was enthusiastically received. Miss Margaret Lanz had the care of the May dance, it being given by Miss Evelyn MacMillan, Miss Doris Drake, Miss Gertrude Allin, Miss Elsie Graham, Miss Florence Smith, Miss Winifred Grierson, Miss Esther Allen, Miss Lucile Stephenson, Miss Ione Brenckenridge, Miss Lydia Sourbier and Miss Corinne Johnson.

Torch Swinging.

Torch Swinging. The evening attendance was large and all business increased accordingly. Ice cream and lemonade stands were favorite places, the demand keeping those in charge busy all the evening. The programme for the evening included the pretty daisy May pole dance and torch swinging by Lessing Bandlow. This number of the programme was greatly enjoyed and heartily applauded.

The pound auction with Vivian Allen as auctioneer was a big number of the evening's entertainment.

The committees have worked hard for the success of the evening and judging from the patronage and enthusiasm their object was accomplished and a good sum will be realized.

With the single exception of Lord Rosebery, all commentators of prominence in England seem to look for a compromise between the liberals and tories on the house of lords issue. The sudden death of King Edward at the height of the constitutional crisis enforced a cessation of conflict and gave time for reconsideration and calmer deliberation. The suggestions of King George that the hostile parties seek a compromise could not be disregarded and the conference is already underway. Of course, the extremists on each side are suspicious. The radicals, Irish and labor members regard any composition with the lords and tories as reactionary, the Irish especially, because it threatens to rob them of the Balance of power which Redmond has been holding over Premier Asquith's head to compel activity in the interest of home rule. On the other side, the tariff reform or protectionist wing of the tories suspect Balfour of treating with the liberals in the intention of dishing their pet project, of which he has never been an enthusiastic supporter. Nevertheless, if Asquith and Balfour can reach an agreement upon some reform of the lords or recasting of the relations between the two houses, the two big parties may be able to disregard their mutinous members and disaffected allies.—Pittsburg Despatch.

Wireless Regulation.

The remarkable development of ra-mo-communication and the peculiar form of this means of transferring messages have made necessary some messages have made necessary some form of government regulation. The bill which has been passed by the senate, and which doubtless will become law, has been opposed by many persons financially interested in wireless telegraphy and by many amateurs who have taken it up as a hobby. There are hundreds of the latter in the United States have taken it up as a hobby. There are hundreds of the latter in the United States.

The aim of the proposed law is not to permit individuals of small companies from operating wireless systems, so long as there is not wrongful or harmful interference with interstate or land-and-water communication. The bill specifically provides that licenses are not necessary for the operation of intrastate system, is the operation thereof does not cause trouble to interstate communication.

One could hardly imagine anything much more difficult to regulate in a reasonable manner—that is, without causing hardship to anyone—than the operation of wireless telegraphy or wirelss telephony; yet it is obvious that there must be regulation of some kind if there are not to be serious complications.—Buffalo Express.

Is Charlton Going to Escape? The history of our state department policy, the strength of the Angio-Saxon belief in trial and punishment in the jurisdiction where the crime was committed, and the fact—a most practical consideration—that it would be irregular and may be wholly impossible for any of our courts state or be irregular and may be wholly impossible for any of our courts, state or federal, to take jurisdiction, all of these things combine to create the desire that the Italian government shall ask extradition of Porter Charkon for trial in Italy.

If, refusing to ask extradition where it has refused to grant it, the Italian government should take no steps in the case, and it proved impossible, even by straining a technicality, for our own courts to take jurisdiction, a serious gap would be revealed in our laws and international relations. In that case it would doubtless be impossible to pass a law that would cover the Chariton case itself. Such legislation, so far as it related to past offenses, would be in the nature of expost facto legislation, and therefore unconstitutional. But assuredly in such an event the most zarnest efforts should be made to make impossible the recurrence of such a disgraceful condition of things—a condition of things that would bring government itself into contempt.—N. Y. Globs and Advertiser.

One Less N. E. Judge.

Should Justice Moody avail himself Should Justice Moody avail himself of the measure contemplating his retirement from the United States supreme court. It will leave Justice Holmes as the only New Englander a member of that august tribunal. It is not a foregone conclusion that President Taft would not find an eastern man to fill the vacancy, but indications have not encouraged the idea.—Brockton Times.

"Gladly," said the lady, all smiles, and she wrapped a doughnut in a newspaper and handed it to him. 'So you like my doughnuts, do you?"
